Monetary Allusions in Humor

Young people nowadays imagine money is everything; when they grow older they know it.

—O. Wilde, Portrait of Dorian Gray.

By DR. JOSEPH RAYMOND*

A plethora of humorous allusions, ranging from slapstick to profound, relate to money. Numismatists, philosophers, poets, songsters and comedians strum their respective banjos, tema con variazioni, about the almighty dollar. A man even threw one across the Potomac.¹ (No feat in Washington's time: money went much farther then.) Taxes prevent its traveling far these days, as R. Armour suggests in It All Started With Columbus:

When the income tax came into being, people were put into tax brackets where they were held securely until they gave up. Most of them gave up plenty.

Indeed, paying taxes gives some idea of a cow's feelings toward the milking machine. Last year I tried paying my taxes with a smile, but the government insisted on money. But let us turn to happier topics, and fabricate a mosaic of monetary allusions found in humor. There are, after all, other things in life besides money: stocks, bonds and annuities, for example.

A point of departure is my neighbor's son, Hugh Next, who attended a backward school for forward boys in the East. Hugh, a loyal family man, set aside $10 monthly for Old Grand Dad. (He drank lots to forget his sorrows, but had a very good memory—lapsus memoriae). The Nexts considered languages to be the most expensive part of college:

Dear Folks: My Scotch cost me $140 this semester. Am confined to the house with a sharp attack of penury . . . been majoring in Math. Dollars to doughnuts (an even bet these days), I'm going to get a system out of it to beat the numbers. Also, I like Science. You know Franklin discovered electricity, but the man who invented the meter made the money. Quick-silver (fast money) also appeals to me. The best way, I find, to double my money is to fold it and put it back into my bill-fold. Thus, I'll have enough money for the rest of my life—if I die tomorrow. Also studying Latin, e.g., E Pluribus Unum means "Show me a man who has no money and I'll show you a bum." Well, please do let me hear from you, even if it's only $10. Your son, Hugh.

College left Hugh unphased. Footloose and family free, he first became an artist, drawing relief checks.² He met Lucy, adoring her gentle blue eyes, snowy white teeth and cool green money. He worshipped the ground she trod—until he learned she didn't own it. He heard that her father had a thriving business and that his health was failing. After Hugh took her for his awful wedded wife, the truth emerged: Dad's business was failing but his health was thriving.

Soon Lucy left Hugh for a young motor-man.³ "More power to you," he waved her away. But he had to pay alimony, or taxation without representation. Lucy only wanted custody of the money. A true vegetarian thereafter, she only pursued men with lots of cabbage. Finally Hugh remarried her to avoid paying alimony. He disliked the pay-as-you-go plan. Later he deserted her.⁴ She had called him a worm (which I couldn't believe until I saw a chicken pick him up). Still young, he died and left everything to an orphanage: seven children. Quem di diligunt adolescens moritur. All his life he had been unlucky, then at last he struck it rich:

2. He tried many ideas, e.g., invented a fountain pen with a meatball point that wrote under gravy, dog-biscuits that tasted like a man's leg, and a hair tonic which instead of growing new hair just shrank the customer's head so that existing hair covered it. He emceed at funerals, started a Bookie-of-the-Month Club, and tried his luck at a hand laundry, but failed because people preferred to wash their own hands; he became a mattress tester, but lay down on the job; was society editor for the Hobo News (an anemic paper, it had poor circulation); and later was music editor for Popular Mechanics.

Digging his grave, they struck oil: Glück und Glas, wie bald bricht das.

My college days (or a mauvais quart d'heure). In college I learned to get along almost without money.⁵ Quit my first part-time job: didn't want to keep a horse out of work. Then I worked for the librarian, who gave me a fine reference:

Raymond has been with us one week. Now that he is leaving us, we are satisfied . . .

Starvation stared me in the face, a terrible sight for both of us. I was so skinny if I put a dime in my pocket I was off balance. Posing for War Relief posters, I saved something for a rainy day: one umbrella. Often I ate at the Greasy Cuchara. They served chocolate ice cream (it didn't show the dirt). At times sympathetic faculty (the ones who divided what was left after the football coach was paid), took me out to eat, just to see sparks fly from a knife and fork.⁶ My minute steaks were gone in 10 seconds. Poverty, a professor smugly assured me, is a blessing in disguise (the disguise is perfect). In those four years I bought only one woolen suit, advertised:

$20 each. At this price they won't last long.

By my senior year, I was bilious (owed a lot of bills) and needed a doctor.⁸ When I called at his office (Lasciate ogni speranza, voi ch'entrate), he looked at me and asked, "What do you do for a living . . . you are living, aren't you?" He took X-rays (previews of coming extractions), wanting $75 to remove my tonsils. I gave him $15 and told him just to loosen them a little. Later in the visit he observed, "You remind me of Lincoln — he's dead, you know." He said, "Now open your mouth and stick out your checkbook," adding, "You'll be walking in a month."⁹ True. The sale of my car¹⁰ just covered his bill. When I got well he said it was only my strong constitution that saved me. (He forgot that when he made out the bill.) I offered him my personal check for $20 or $5 cash. He offered me a job to pay the bill: standing outside his office to make people sick. Incidentally, he could perform magic tricks. A child swallowed a nickel and the doctor made his mother cough up $5.

Every time I passed the pawnbroker's window it was like looking into my own room. That pawnbroker¹¹ (one who lives off the flat of the land) always tried to pass the buck except when it had Washington's picture on it. Money flowed through his fingers as glue on a cold day. On vacations he stayed home and let his mind wander. Dining out with friends, when he saw the check coming he was afflicted with a slight impediment of the reach. Whenever he took out his pocket-book moths escaped, and when he withdrew nickels from his pocket, Jefferson blinked at the sunlight. But he was good to his wife: brought home everything he stole. On the side she picked cotton: he picked pockets. To some he looked fat. I knew the truth: it wasn't fat, but money belts . . . saving his money for a rainy century. Only time he left tips was when he ate asparagus.¹² You know how some men smoke cigars short as they can? He smoked his as long as he could. Compared to him, Jack Benny is a philanthropist. Once he gave his son a beating for buying an all-day sucker at 4 p.m.

I lived at 305 College Ave. in a small room. Or not really small: the cockroaches were just so big. It was a poor¹³ section, although the people there were comparatively wealthy: they were the only ones in the block who ever had garbage. One day I told the landlord (a nice fellow deep down in his pocketbook), "I hate to complain, but grass is growing up through the floor."¹⁴ He growled, "Whatya expect for $20 a month, roses?" The roof leaked so much I often found myself eating the soup three times. If I paid my rent a month in advance, police wanted to know where the money came from. I had trouble meeting my bills. (Some had trouble dodging theirs.)

After college I went with a girl until I discovered she spent $3000 on hairstyles. Then I went with her hairdresser. When finally I married a girl, her father asked, "Can you support a family?" I said, "Of course." He insisted, "Are you sure? There are seven of us." At first it wasn't so bad living with her folks; what irritated me was that her folks lived with their folks.

The other night my wife gave herself an economy wave (home permanent) and

5. Dad lost all in the 1929 crash: a broker jumped from a 14th story window and smashed his pushcart.

6. I had hundreds of things to eat in my room — beans. When I got tired of them I just skipped a meal.

7. Exceptio probat regulam.

8. 50% of doctors who switched to camels now drive cars again.

9. A 20th century Robin Hood, he stole from the rich and from the poor, too. He was as phony as an undertaker trying to look sad at a $6000 funeral.

10. I paid cash for the car but had the battery charged. It didn't grow on a tree; rather, it came from a plant.

11. He was a bachelor — cheating some worthy woman out of her alimony (the high cost of leaving).

said, "Let's take that money we've been saving for a car and eat out." So we went to San Francisco. I paid 50 cents to park the car in order not to be fined $2 while we ate sandwiches worth 15 cents for which we paid 75 cents. The waiter (one who thinks money grows on trays) knew we were married by the way I looked first at the right-hand column of the menu. We went to an opera. It was magnificent. I could close my eyes and imagine I was home listening to the radio. Then we went to a theater to see a magician. He vanished a silver dollar, casually picking a youngster from the audience and announcing, "I'll produce the dollar on this boy. Look in your pocket, lad, and find a silver dollar." The boy brought out 95 cents in coins, saying, "I was hungry and spent a nickel for candy." A medium came to the stage for a public demonstration. An audience volunteer paid her $20. She told him, "You have two questions." He countered, "Isn't that a lot for only two questions?" "Yes, sir, it is," she replied. "And now your second question?"

Prices still are climbing. Pumpernickel is now pumperdime. I watched inflation¹⁵ at work last weekend in a dice game in Reno.¹⁶ Those cubes were so loaded they left skid marks. New electric slot machines now accept unemployment checks.¹⁷ Those rich Nevada cattlemen don't brand cattle any more, they engrave them. After studying the well-to-do there, I am led to believe if one wishes to make a living he must work hard; if he wants to get rich, he must attack the problem from an entirely different angle.

Before going out now to get an estimate on a four-pound steak, I must announce a billfold containing ten $20 bills has just been turned in. The person who lost it should form a double line 8:30 Monday morning at Room 3, Journalism Building.

Quite a few requests have been made about my writing this article, but I've done it, anyway. It establishes a true perspective for the dollar, and I rely upon every reader to misinterpret it.

Ptolemaic Queens

By CECILIA HUTT, San Francisco

Most historians say that the Ptolemaic queens, descended from Alexander's marshal, were, for the most part, as courageous and spirited as the Macedonian soldier who was their ancestor. Some add that they also were cruel, avaricious and unscrupulous. These vices, though, were characteristics as well of the Ptolemaic kings, who were blood-relatives of most of their queens. Historians are not always unbiased, and the records show that several of the Macedonian queens of Egypt stayed in the background and led quiet lives. Perhaps one or two of the others acted as they did in self-defense. It was, after all, a rough and rugged era.

Berenice I. There is no evidence that Berenice I had ambitions to be anything other than queen consort. She was a Macedonian widow with two children and lady-in-waiting to the wife of Ptolemy I, Eurydice, when Ptolemy fell in love with her and married her. The king later decided to have his son by her succeed him rather than Ptolemy Ceraunus, son of Eurydice. There are bronze coins showing Ptolemy I, with Berenice on the reverse. There are others (rare) showing the head of Berenice and the monogram of the king of Cyrenaica, Magas, who was the son of Berenice by her previous marriage. Ptolemy II instituted the system of deifying the Ptolemies, and had coins made showing himself and Arsinoe II, with the legend, Adelphon, on obverse, and his parents and the word Theon on reverse. Ptolemy I and Berenice I became known as the Saviour Gods.

Arsinoe I, daughter of Lysimachus, was the first wife of Ptolemy II. There isn't much information about her, but she seems to have been an unpretentious queen and dutiful wife. More of her story is told in the next paragraph.

Arsinoe II. It is obvious from the portraits on the coins of this queen that she was very pretty. There is little doubt that she was a selfish, ambitious, politically-minded woman who wasn't very squeamish about her methods for acquiring power. When she was very young she was married to the King of Thrace, Lysimachus, who, like her father, Ptolemy I, was one of the successors of Alexander and, therefore, was very much her senior. Many writers say that Arsinoe accused her stepson, Agathocles, of plotting against his father, and provided the poison with which the old king killed his son, in order that her sons by Lysimaehus would be the heirs to the throne. In a war with Seleucus, another of the successors, however, Lysimaehus, who by this time also was king of Macedon, was killed. His soldiers deserted to the victor and Arsinoe barely escaped with her life. Her half-brother, Ptolemy Ceraunus, killed his benefactor, Seleucus, and now considered himself king of Thrace and Macedonia, but he had a wary eye out for Arsinoe's claims for her sons. He promised her that if she would marry him he would make her queen of Macedonia and adopt her children. When he had her in his power he killed her two young sons (there is a possibility that an older son had gone to Illyria), and she fled to Egypt. There, by her strong will and ruthlessness, and by using the political cruelty of the times, she became not only the queen of Egypt, but also was deified and worshiped as a goddess. Ptolemy II, her full brother, was married to another Arsinoe (daughter of Lysimachus by a previous marriage) who had borne the king three children. Arsinoe, the sister, accused the queen of plotting against her husband, the king (same old useful plot). The king apparently believed it willingly and exiled his wife and married his elder sister. The custom of full-brother-and-sister marriage was an old established one with the ancient Egyptian royalty, but was frowned upon by the Macedonians and Greeks who, it is thought by some, allowed half-brothers and sisters (but not of the same mother) to marry. Perhaps Arsinoe II convinced her brother that, as he was king of Egypt, it was a good move, politically, to follow the example of the old Pharaohs.

Ptolemy II and Arsinoe II are known as the Brother-and-Sister Gods. She had no more children, but adopted those of Arsinoe I. She had another brother and a half-brother killed on the always-good charge of plotting against the throne and, with her way then clear, she took charge of things. Ptolemy II was not the strong man his father had been (his sister must have inherited that trait), and seemed to lean on his sister-wife for the five years before her death in 270 B.C.

Berenice II was the daughter of Magas of Cyrenaia, and became queen of that country. She was married to her cousin, Ptolemy III, Euergetes I, and together they were known as the Benefactor Gods. She had the reputation of being virtuous, and nothing but good has been written about this Hellenistic queen after she married Ptolemy. They had four children, one of whom died in infancy. Their son, Ptolemy IV, was married to his sister, Arsinoe. Some bronze coins of Ptolemy III were struck with the head of Berenice on reverse; and others of gold, silver and bronze with her head on obverse, with the reverse sides having various symbols, but reading Queen Berenice (in Greek).

Arsinoe III was the sister and wife of Ptolemy IV, Philopator. They were known as the Father-loving Gods. This Ptolemy was one of the worst of the line. He was a wicked, cruel and weak king and a drunkard. He had his brother Magas sealed to death in his bath, his uncle killed, and his mother poisoned at the instigation of Sosibius, who was his prime minister, and who wanted to rule without obstructions. From all accounts Arsinoe III led a blameless and unhappy life, and, after the mysterious death of her husband, she was murdered by the palace eunuchs to prevent her from becoming guardian and regent for her son. Some gold and bronze coins, showing her head, were struck.

Cleopatra I. The name Cleopatra is Greek, meaning "having a glorious father," and also had been the name of the sister of Alexander the Great. Cleopatra I was the daughter of Antiochus III of Syria and in 193 B.C. became the wife of Ptolemy V, Epiphanes and Eucharistos, the God Manifest and Gracious. Her ancestry was Macedonian and Persian, and she introduced a Persian strain into the hitherto Macedonian blood of the Ptolemies. She shared her husband's titles (Epiphanes, etc.). After his death she was regent for their son, Ptolemy VI, Philometor, for about eight years, the first of the Ptolemaic queens to have this authority. She governed well, and no slander has been attached to her name. She had coins in bronze and silver minted in her name, some of the bronze showing her as Isis, with a Ptolemaic eagle on fulmen on reverse. Antiochus IV of Syria had coins struck during his occupation of Egypt with her portrait on them (she was his sister).

Cleopatra II, daughter of Cleopatra I, was married to her brother, Ptolemy VI, Philometor, and they were worshiped as the Mother-loving Gods. It would take too much space here to go into the history of Egypt of that time, but it would seem that Cleopatra II must have been a wise, influential and tactful woman, as well as a strong-minded one who was determined to rule. She made and kept peace between her two brothers to the extent that they ruled together for five years, until the younger brother made trouble for Philometor, and then, at the bidding of Rome, went to rule at Cyreanaica. Some credit must go to Philometor, however, as he was a kind and forgiving man. Philometor and Cleopatra had four children. A son, known as Ptolemy VII, Eupator, was for several years before his death joint-king with his father. Two daughters, both named Cleopatra, were, of course, made pawns in the political game. One, who became Cleopatra III, was betrothed to Philometor's brother, who was mentioned above.

The other daughter, Cleopatra Thea, was married in 150 B.C. to Alexander Balas, Pretender to the throne of Syria. She later married Demetrius II, and then Antiochus VII, both kings of Syria. When her son, Antiochus VIII, Grypus, became heir to the throne, she was his guardian, and true to the blood of her ancestors, she assumed full powers as queen. In 125 B.C. she had silver tetradrachms struck with her head on obverse, and on reverse double cornucopiac with the legend, in Greek, "of Queen Cleopatra, Goddess of Plenty." There also are bronze and silver coins with heads jugate of Cleopatra Thea and her son, Antiochus VIII, Grypus.

Another son of Philometor and Cleopatra II, Ptolemy Neos Philopator IX, for whose reign Cleopatra II was regent, was killed by his uncle, who then became king. Cleopatra II was obliged by public opinion in Alexandria to marry the brother after Philometor's death. The brother is known as Ptolemy VIII, Eurgetes II. He later married her daughter, Cleopatra III, who had been betrothed to him by her father, and Cleopatra II, Eurgetes II and Cleopatra III ruled together until Eurgetes was forced to flee from Alexandria. He took with him Cleopatra III, their children, and his son, Memphites, by Cleopatra II. Cleopatra II then was regarded as sole ruler in Alexandria and, so the story goes, Eurgetes, in revenge, had their son killed, and his dismembered body sent to the queen on her birthday. Eurgetes and Cleopatra III returned to Alexandria, however. This time Cleopatra II fled, but there was a reconciliation, and the three of them again reigned jointly. Cleopatra II was queen for about 57 years. There were issued by Ptolemy VIII, Eurgetes II, bronze coins with the heads of each of his two wives. This Ptolemy was nicknamed by the Alexandrians Physcon, meaning Pot-belly. He died in 116 B.C.

Cleopatra III was, after the deaths of her mother and husband (who also was her uncle) a most domineering, meddlesome and despotic woman, who pushed her children around in her efforts to get her own way. Her husband's will stated that she was to rule Egypt with whichever of their two sons she chose. The people insisted, however, upon the older, who became Ptolemy X, Soter II, nicknamed Lathyrus (Chickpea). He was not her choice, and she made life miserable for him. She forced him to divorce his sister-wife, Cleopatra IV, with whom he was happy, and marry another sister, Cleopatra V, Selene. Cleopatra III ruled with Soter II until she was able to push him out temporarily, and then ruled with his brother, Ptolemy XI, Alexander. I have seen listed a coin minted during the reign of Soter II with the inscription, "Cleopatra Queen" and on reverse two eagles on fulmen and the legend, "Ptolemy King."

After Cleopatra III managed to send Soter II into exile, she took away from him his second sister-wife, Cleopatra Selene, whom she had forced him to marry, and had Cleopatra Selene married to Antiochus VIII, Grypus, of Syria. Grypus previously had been married to Cleopatra Selene's sister, Tryphaena. He was the son of Cleopatra Thea, sister of Cleopatra III. Cleopatra Selene later became the wife of two other Syrian kings, Antiochus IX, Cyzicenus, who was half brother to Grypus, and Antiochus Eusebes, who was the son of Cyzicenus. This marry-go-round is an example of the kind of life that many of these Ptolemaic queens lived, and not always from choice.

Berenice III was the daughter of Soter II. She had been married to her uncle, Ptolemy Alexander, who was forced into exile in 89 B.C. and was killed a year later. Berenice returned to Egypt to rule with her father, who had returned to the throne. When her father died she was his heir, but in order to follow tradition she agreed to marry a young relative who was pushed forward by Sulla, dictator of Rome. The new king is known as Ptolemy XII, Alexander II, and he murdered his wife within three weeks. She had been well liked by her people, and a furious mob dragged him out and killed him.

Cleopatra VI Tryphaena was the wife of the next king, Ptolemy XIII Auletes, and she probably was the mother of the most famous of the Cleopatras, Cleopatra VII. When Auletes felt that he was insecure on the throne and went to Rome to obtain help and friendship by bribery, the Egyptians put his oldest daughter, Berenice IV on the throne. (Perhaps with Cleopatra Tryphaena, who died shortly thereafter.) When Auletes was restored to his throne (55 B.C.), he had Berenice murdered. He died four years later, and bequeathed the kingdom to his elder daughter Cleopatra VII and elder son, Ptolemy XIV. (Writers "number" these kings differently.)

Cleopatra VII. Her story is well known. With her intelligence she must have seen from her childhood that her country was at the mercy of Rome, and could not exist without the help and consent of Rome. With her intriguing, unscrupulous, often cruel and often courageous ways, she was a true descendant of the strongest of the Macedonian queens. Although she is famed for her beauty, her portraits on her coins show her to be not so goodlooking as many of her ancestors. Her personality must have accounted for much of her historic charm.

Cleopatra Selene of Mauretania was the daughter of Cleopatra VII and Mark Antony. Octavius married her to Juba II of Mauretania. Cleopatra Selene and Juba both, as children, had marched in a Roman triumphal procession. The coins with her head on them have her inscription in Greek, while Juba used Latin for his. Other coins of her alone, in Greek, and her types, show her pride in her Egyptian ancestry. She is the last of the Ptolemaic women known about with certainty. Apparently her upbringing by Antony's wife, Octavia, who was known as the best kind of woman, softened the fierce Macedonian strain, because there is no record of cruelty on her part.

Cleopatra Selene and Juba named their only son Ptolemy. Ptolemy reigned together with Juba for a short time, and then alone until 40 A.D., when he was ordered killed by Caligula. Rome then took back the African kingdom it had given to Juba II in 25 B.C.

Cleopatra Selene and her son Ptolemy are not, of course, royalty of Egypt, but they should be mentioned here because they bring to a close the authenticated history of the line of kings and queens that was started shortly after the death of Alexander in 323 B.C. by Ptolemy, son of Lagus. Cleopatra VII and Antony had two other children, Ptolemy and Alexander Helios, twin of Cleopatra Selene. They went with their sister to Mauretania, and then seem to fade from the picture.

Even though I have omitted many interesting details and episodes from this short story about the Berenices, Arsinoes and Cleopatras, it reads quite a bit like a gossip column. But, then, so much of world history is like that.

Lincoln Cent Sports New Reverse Design

New reverse design of the Lincoln cent is a front view of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington. The design, by Frank Gasparro of the Philadelphia Mint, was approved by President Eisenhower Dec. 20, 1958. The change had been recommended by Robert B. Anderson, Secretary of the Treasury, as a feature of Lincoln's birth sesquicentennial.

Minting began Jan. 2 and distribution Feb. 12, Lincoln's birthday. Both Philadelphia and Denver Mints are striking the coin.

The old reverse design by Victor D. Brenner, featuring two heads of wheat, has been used since 1909. The same reverse legends appear on the new coin, E PLURIBUS UNUM, UNITED STATES OF AMERICA and ONE CENT, but their positions are changed. Obverse of the coin remains the same.

Monterey and Pacific Grove

Unemployed persons of Monterey and Pacific Grove were hired at $2 a day as laborers on civic development projects, being paid in the warrants. The cities accepted the scrip in payment of taxes and licenses; the water and gas companies accepted originals (those paid to the unemployed); in fact, all firms except the telephone company and one chain store accepted the warrants. Some merchants, however, placed a limit on the number they would have on hand at any given time. The local labor union argued that $2 a day was not enough pay; that the amount should be raised to $4 a day, even if that meant working the men only half a day. One hundred sixty-eight families, each having one child or more and which had lived in the community for at least one year, were benefited. They were checked for worthiness by the local Community Chest committee. A Chamber of Commerce trade warrant committee of 12 members was in charge of the project but hired a man to handle details. At first Charlie Brown, later Monterey postmaster, was paid $150 in the scrip for the job, at which he worked two weeks. Then Walter C. Ridener, Monterey Chamber of Commerce secretary, and A.C. (Gus) Jochmus, secretary of the Pacific Grove

Chamber of Commerce, were given the assignment. Ridener was paid $25 a month (in warrants); Jochmus, $15 a month. Warrants were redeemed at the banks out of the trade stamp fund. The first issue ($1 warrants) was begun Feb. 7, 1933. By Feb. 21, $1007 in trade warrants had been issued; by April 3, $3800 worth. The $5000 issue was completed July 17. The warrants turned over on an average of once every two days. Because some merchants, especially grocers, were unwilling to give change for the dollar warrant, the committee decided to issue 50-cent scrip. Although this second issue was to begin in mid-July, 1933, some specimens were dated as early as May.

Oakland

Educational Broadcasting Corporation

Scrip issued by the Educational Broadcasting Corporation, 1520 Eighth Ave., Oakland, is not considered true depression scrip by cataloguers.

Oakland

Natural Development Association, Oakland Unit

The Oakland unit of the Natural Development Association, Salt Lake City, Utah, had its headquarters at 818 Harrison St., Oakland. H.W. Savage, speakers' bureau chairman of the Oakland unit, said that NDA scrip was exchanged in Oakland for food, doctors' services, clothing, garage bills, and other necessities. The Salt Lake City office imported fish and fruit from its Oakland branch. For listing and description of scrip, see Natural Development Association, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Oakland

Oakland Clearing House Association

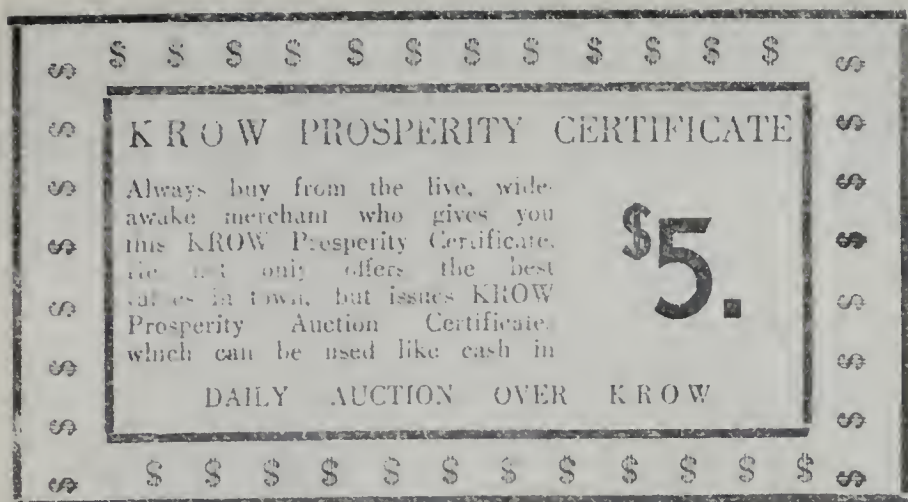

The Oakland Clearing House Association planned to issue $1,000,000 in certificates on March 10, 1933. There were to be 250,000 notes of $1 denomination, 250,000 of $5, 300,000 of $10, and 100,000 of $20. On March 6 the Association ordered plates made and invited printing bids. It said that it would postpone printing until the San Francisco Clearing House Association decided for or against issuing certificates. The OCHA wired William Woodin, Secretary of the Treasury, on March 8, for permission to issue scrip, then ordered the immediate printing of $1,000,000 in certificates. On March 9 the Association called off its plan to issue scrip and the printing was stopped. Will C. Wood, spokesman for the Association, announced that when federal government action permitted, Oakland banks would open for business as usual. The Association authorized banks to honor all Alameda County indigent relief checks, estimated to total $60,000.

Radio Station KROW, prosperity certificate

23 $\frac{3}{8}$ x 41 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.

Station KROW solicited manufacturers of various products for donations of goods, which were described over the radio during the station's daily "prosperity auction sale" in 1933. Bids could be mailed or phoned in. Successful bidders paid for the merchandise in prosperity certificates, which were obtained at retailers' stores in amounts equal to purchases. Retailers paid the station for the advertising. Posters listing merchandise to be auctioned were placed in the merchants' store windows. Four denominations, printed in black, were issued: 25 cents on salmon-colored paper; 50 cents, yellow; $1, blue; and $5, white. Not a true depression scrip, this was early, if not the first, "radio money".

Oakland

Although there were 14 barter groups in Alameda County by Jan. 21, 1933, only the Natural Development Association issued scrip. Most units used a system of bookkeeping credits upon which vouchers were drawn. These vouchers did not circulate, but were redeemed for goods. Barter cooperatives were united under the central Eastbay County Council of Unemployed. Chief among them were the Unemployed Exchange Association (UXA) and the Unemployed Cooperative Relief Association (UCRA).

The Unemployed Exchange Association was organized in August 1932 by some 600 families in the Dimond-Allendale section of Oakland. No scrip was issued, but credits were entered in the organization's books, a member receiving 100 credits for each hour's work. Credits could be spent at the commissary store, 3768 Penniman St. It cost 125 credits for a haircut, 65 credits for 25 pounds of potatoes, 5 credits for a pound of onions, and 30 credits for a pound of beans. Carl Rhodehamel, cellist, symphony orchestra director, and a pioneer in radio broadcasting (Station KGO) and sound motion pictures, was UXA chairman. Other UXA figures were John A.E. Olson, agriculture expert; W.C. Pugh, official trader, who learned the knack by swapping horses in the Arkansas Ozarks; and Dave Barry, mechanical expert. Originally organized as a unit of the Oakland UXA, the town of Coonsaw, in the Sierra 28 miles east of Oroville, announced on June 24, 1935, that it was the first "barter community" in the state. Population was 135. S.G. Coon, the town's principal founder, headed the group.

Who's Who In California Numismatics

By R. G. McARTHUR

Is there a doctor in the house? There certainly is, and what's more, he's on the CSNA board of directors. We refer, of course, to Dr. Curtis R. Paxman. Associated with Frederiek M. O'Connor, M.D., and Eric O. F. Lewis, M.D., his offices are at 13307 S. San Antonio Dr., Norwalk, Calif.

Curtis Roberts Paxman, son of George (now deceased) and Isabel Paxman, was born Jan. 20, 1913, in Hamilton, N.D. After completing grammar and high schools in Hamilton, Paxman acquired B.A., B.S. and M.D. degrees at the University of North Dakota and Temple University, Philadelphia. After graduation in 1939, he interned at the Orange County Hospital, Orange, Calif.

Prior to completing his medical education, Paxman taught high school in North Dakota for three years, two years as principal. Since 1940, he has been engaged continuously in the general practice of medicine and surgery.

Curtis and Gladys Paxman, who were married in 1935, have three children. Marlys, 18, is a freshman in engineering at the University of Southern California; Janice, 14, is a high school junior; and Ralph, 6, is in the first grade.

Dr. Paxman began collecting coins in 1935, with Indian cents as his first project. Since then, he has included all United States cents from 1793 to date, other U.S. denominations, Canadian and ancient coins. He is a member of Orange County, Los Angeles, Long Beach and Norwalk coin clubs. He was vice-president of the Norwalk Coin Club in 1957 and president in 1958.

As mentioned, Dr. Paxman is a director in the California State Numismatic Association. He also served as chairman of the membership committee in 1957. As a service to the Numismatic Association of Southern California, of which he also is a director, he recently compiled and mimeographed a list of club speakers. Memberships also are held by the doctor in the Canadian Numismatic Association and the American Numismatic Association. He was program chairman for the 1958 ANA convention in Los Angeles.

From the foregoing, one would get the impression that the good doctor spends all of his time on numismatics. Such is not the case, however. He is vice-president of the General Practice Section of the Los Angeles County Medical Association and is an active member in the California Medical Association, the American Medical Association and the American Academy of General Practice.

In response to the question, "What do you do in your spare time?", the doctor replied, "I also have been interested in early model automobiles and belong to the Horseless Carriage Club of America and to two local chapters. I also belong to the Long Beach Model "T" Ford Club. So, if Dr. Paxman should pay you a visit, do not be surprised to see him drive up in any one of the following cars: 1908 Sears Roebuck auto

Sunday, April 12

- 1:00 p.m. Convention Closes

All events will take place on the main floor or the mezzanine. The official printed program will show names of the various rooms to be used.

THE BELLEVUE HOTEL

Located at Geary and Taylor Sts. in the heart of San Francisco, the Bellevue Hotel is conveniently close to the main shopping district, theaters, the new downtown airline terminal, etc. (This is the same hotel in which the April 1954 convention was held.) A public garage is located on Taylor St., immediately adjacent to the hotel, and with direct elevator service to the hotel lobby.

The hotel has been newly redecorated. The "Pam-Pam" Room is open 24 hours a day, serving delicious meals. The Regent Room is the intimate cocktail lounge, serving the finest of drinks.

Hotel rates are:

Single	$7-8-9-10 per day
Double-bed	$9-10-11-12 per day
Twin beds	$10-11-12-14 per day
Suite (parlor-bedroom)	$18-20-22-25 per day

Reservation blanks will be forwarded directly to all CSNA members. Those desiring hotel rooms should forward these blanks as soon as possible to the hotel. The hotel management has assured us of complete cooperation.

REGISTRATION —

Winn Osborne in charge

Registration will be $2. Banquet tickets will be $5 per person. The official printed program will be furnished at the time of registration.

EXHIBITS — Roy Hill in charge

Exhibit blanks will be mailed directly to all members. Every effort should be made by exhibitors to set up their displays on Thursday or Friday morning. Deadline for prize eligibility is 10 a.m., Saturday. You need not be a CSNA member to exhibit. The usual charge of 50 cents per case (or space for case) will apply. Dealers please note that we are soliciting your exhibits. These will be on a competitive basis among yourselves, with a first, second and third prize ribbon to be awarded.

BOURSE — Earl A. Parker in charge

Any dealer desiring bourse space should contact Earl A. Parker, 1254 Market St., San Francisco. Rate of $27.50 will apply, which includes badge registration. When making application for this space, please indicate whether you will have your own cases, or if you will require CSNA cases.

SOCIAL GET-TOGETHER —

John E. Ohls in charge

Details of this Thursday night social event, something new, are not yet available. You may be sure, however, that John will come up with something, and that this will be an event that should not be missed.

AUCTION — Don L. Rhodes

Don is hard at work preparing the auction catalog for this event. This catalog will be mailed directly by Don to all CSNA members. There undoubtedly will be some outstanding items, and this sale should not be missed by those desiring to pick up items for their collections.

LADIES' ENTERTAINMENT —

Mrs. Beatrice Liss in charge

While plans are not yet complete, Mrs. Liss promises to have some first rate entertainment on Friday afternoon — with surprises and prizes. Ladies — do not miss this event!

NUMISMATIC FORUM —

Mrs. Harry Cutler in charge

The three speakers will be F.E. Howard, Mrs. Mabel Patterson and Donald L. Rhodes. Each will speak for about 15 minutes. This is another of the "must-attend" features of our convention.

CLUB OFFICERS' BREAKFAST —

Clifford L. Liss in charge

This "get-together" breakfast was first instituted at the CSNA convention in San Francisco, April 1954, and has proved to be very successful. The various local club officers have a chance to compare notes as to the successful operation of their clubs and to discuss various problems.

BUSINESS MEETING —

Harry S. Davidson, CSNA

President, in charge

All CSNA members should attend this meeting. Various items will be brought up for discussion. Election of officers for the coming year will be held.

BANQUET ENTERTAINMENT —

John E. Ohls in charge

John has promised some "top-notch" entertainers, details of which will, of course, be kept secret until time for their appearance. There will be no main speaker.

Magazine Money Men

Dr. C. Glenn Curtis, Brea, and Prof. Charles V. Kappen, San Jose, recently have been subjects of magazine articles — Dr. Curtis in the College of Medical Evangelists' CME Alumni Journal, and Prof. Kappen in Lyke, feature magazine of San Jose State College.

Pictures of Dr. Curtis and coins adorn the cover page of the July-August 1958 CME Alumni Journal. Inside, pages 16-21 are devoted to the story, "Money, Money, Money". Thirteen illustrations of Dr. Curtis and his coins accompany the text.

The Winter 1959 edition of Lyke magazine, featured as a "Money Issue", contains several articles on or related to money. The article on Prof. Kappen and his collection, written by Deanne Boomer, is entitled "SJS Money Man". The article, accompanied by nine illustrations, occupies pages 38 and 39 of the magazine. Corky Dannenbrink was photographer.

Most coins pictured in both articles are ancient and odd and curious.

Attn.: Auctioneers

Written bids are now being accepted for the April 1960 California State Numismatic Association convention auction, to be held at Stockton, Calif. Mail bids to Winn Osborne, secretary, 440 Via Val Verde, Montebello, Calif., or to Harry S. Davidson, president, 2960 The Mall, Los Angeles 23, Calif.

Bids will be considered at the April CSNA convention in San Francisco.

Paid-Up Members (1959 Dues).....	360

NOTE: I have on hand more than 300 dues renewals, and membership cards will be mailed out as soon as possible. I have had to spend all my spare time on the Membership Directory; consequently, have had to delay the mailing of cards.

WHERE ARE THEY?

The following members did not receive their 1959 dues notices because of faulty addresses: East Bay Coin Club, O.F. Hanson, Mrs. Warren M. Lang, William E. Otto, Gerald C. Perry, San Gabriel Valley Coin Club, SFC George T. Hoff and Emil Johnson. If any reader has information as to present addresses of the members listed, I will appreciate having them. Their dues notices were returned to me by the Post Office.

WINN OSBORNE,
Secretary.

SOUTH OF THE TEHACHAPIS

By CHARLES M. JOHNSON

A big winter numismatic event in Southern California, the 3-day convention of the Numismatic Association of Southern California was held Feb. 13-15 at the Statler Hotel in Los Angeles. More than 50 bourse dealers registered. Leo A. Young's auction catalog listed a fine group of early United States cents. Dr. Charles L. Ruby, NASC president, was convention chairman.

The San Diego Numismatic Society held its 22nd annual banquet and installation of officers Jan. 24 in the Continental Room of the San Diego Hotel, with 113 in attendance. Dr. Calvert L. Emmons, CSNA president emeritus, installed Paul Hamm, president; Douglas Decker, vice-president; William B. Tragsdorf, secretary; L.T. Gottschall, treasurer; Jerry Beavers, junior vice-president and C.W. Heatton, Thomas R. McDaniel, Arlene Whalen and Francis S. Jones, executive board members. Speaker was Abe Kosoff of Encino, who covered historical highlights of coinage since antiquity. Ralph A. Mitchell of Palo Alto was master of ceremonies. Irving Knickerbocker's exhibit won best-in-show. Other exhibit award winners were Tom Ward, Mrs. Atwood MacDonald, Dr. C.L. Emmons and LeRoy Harvey. Following the dinner, Sam Hinton, Decca recording star, sang folk songs. Visiting dignitaries were Dr. and Mrs. C.L. Emmons, Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Davidson, Mr. and Mrs. Herb Bergen, Mr. and Mrs. John Yribarne, Mr. and Mrs. A. Kosoff, Erich Werling and Ralph A. Mitchell.

During December most clubs elected new slates of officers for 1959. So far, this column has received the following reports:

Los Angeles Coin Club: Lee Kuntz, president; Murray Singer, first vice-president; Paul Freestone, second vice-president; Leonard Simon, recording secretary; Marlene Simon, corresponding secretary; Herbert Rinner, treasurer; and Carl Patten Jr., sergeant-at-arms.

San Bernardino County Coin Club: Charles Colver, president; Dan Harley, vice-president; Sylvia Novaek, recording secretary; Herbert Feinberg, treasurer; Fred Coops, corresponding secretary; and Maybel Iles, mintmaster.

Orange County Coin Club: William E. Hogue, president; Dan Harley, vice-president; Herbert M. Bergen, secretary; John Rime, treasurer; and Dr. C. Glenn Curtis, librarian.

San Fernando Valley Coin Club: George Bennett, president; William Koonee, first vice-president; Russell Snyder, second vice-president; Thomas Wood, secretary; and Dorothy Emcott, treasurer.

Norwalk California Coin Club: Richard Goodson, president; Bill Ross, vice-president; Donald Dodd, secretary; and Harold Shaw, treasurer.

Monterey Park Coin Club: Henri Heller, president; Robert Northwood, vice-president; G. Dannenbaum, treasurer; Edith Benson, recording secretary; and Vera Schymos, corresponding secretary.

San Diego Numismatic Society: Paul Hamm, president; Douglas Decker, vice-president; William Tragsdorf, secretary; L.T. Gottschall, treasurer; and Jerry Beaver, junior vice-president. Francis Jones will edit the SDNS Bulletin.

Long Beach Coin Club: Ida Mae Griffin; president; H.H. Sweet, vice-president; and Lyn Sims, secretary-treasurer.

Ida Mae Griffin, who recently was elected president of the Long Beach Coin Club, has the distinction, insofar as this column is aware, of being the only member of the fairer sex to head a Southern California coin club. She has earned this position by active participation in club and numismatic affairs. She collects U.S. coins from circulation and has completed a number of series. As speaker she is in demand and has given her talk, "Collecting Coins from Circulation", to many clubs in the area.

The Long Beach club's January program was built around a prearranged 3-minute talk by club officers on "How and Why I Am in Numismatics".

On Jan. 17 the Long Beach Coin Club held its annual family night and banquet at the Apple Valley Steak House, billed as a "fine dinner, lots of fun and fellowship, plenty of prizes and No Long Speeches".

Culver City Coin Club, one of the recent additions to the growing list of Southern California clubs, now has a permanent meeting place at Benson Hall, 3822 Cardiff Ave., Culver City, and meets the third Thursday evening each month. Dr. Buford Criswell of Culver City is club secretary.

At the January meeting of the San Fernando Valley Coin Club, with 125 present, Herbert Bergen gave his popular talk, "U.S. Overdates", and displayed his overdate collection. After the talk, George Bennett conducted the club auction, in which a roll of 1939D cents brought $53.

Norwalk California Coin club's January meeting featured a talk by Dr. Curtis Paxman, "Canadian Coins", in which he briefly discussed forerunners, types and history of Canadian coinage. Since the establishment of the mint in 1908, Canada has minted her coins; prior thereto, they were minted in England. Dr. Paxman, whose parents were Canadians, belongs to the Canadian Numismatic Association and has collected Canadian coins and currency for a number of years. His talk was accompanied by a display of part of his Canadian collection.

The Norwalk club has changed its meeting place to the Woman's Clubhouse, 10751 East Imperial Highway, Norwalk, and meets on the first Monday of the month.

W.R. Fanning, former L. A. club president and active numismatist, and his wife, recently returned from Havana where it is rumored he apparently started a revolution and escaped.

At the Los Angeles Coin Club's 370th meeting in January, W.F. Volberg, vice-president of the Los Angeles branch of the Federal Reserve Bank, spoke on "Monetary Management and the Federal Reserve System", in which he surveyed the various credit and monetary controls exercised by the Federal Reserve System. Los Angeles club secretary reports that an average of 191 persons attended each meeting last year, with attendance at the January meeting this year of 230.

Southern Hub Coin Club of Lennox reports 137 attended the January meeting at 4441 Lennox Blvd., Lennox. This club meets on the second Sunday afternoon. It is one of the few clubs that does not meet in the evening.

Peter Payne installed officers for 1959 at the 127th meeting of the San Bernardino County Coin Club in January. Fred Coops, program chairman, introduced Joseph Grant of Pasadena, who talked on "Hawaiian Coins" and displayed part of his collection. Jesse Davis, collector-of-the-month, exhibited several rare coins he found while treasure hunting in Texas. The club's annual banquet was held Jan. 30 at the Azure Hills Country Club.

There were 114 members and guests present at the Christmas party of the San Diego Numismatic Society, which featured an exchange of gifts, music, refreshments and Christmas decorations. L.T. Gott- schall reports that the membership of the club has grown to 211, with 47 adults and seven junior members being admitted during 1958.

Paul Hamm introduced four well-known numismatists, all members of the San Diego Numismatic Society, at the December meeting. They told "what and why they collect certain series of coins". Tom Ward spoke on Roman coins; Leonel Panosh on coins of the Order of Knights Hospitaller of St. John of Jerusalem; Dr. Ray Wilson related how he collects coins of Newfoundland and studies its history; and A.F. Andersen described and displayed his favorite series, the coins of the Philippines.

Herbert Bergen finally found time in December to talk to his own club, Orange County Coin Club, on his favorite topic, "U.S. Overdates", a subject to which he has given special attention and about which he has spoken to several clubs in Southern California. His talk was accompanied by an exhibit of U.S. overdates, showing the various classes and types. He also distributed copies of a chronological chart of overdates, which have been catalogued and recognized as such.

Noteworthy among the Orange County exhibits was a California pioneer gold coin, Pacific Company $5 of 1849, in nearly mint condition. The exhibitor, Leonard Williams, of Lakewood, stated that this is the finest of three known specimens.

NORTH OF THE TEHACHAPIS

By DOROTHY E. BEAULIEU

The Lindsay Coin Club will hold its first annual Central California Numismatic Convention March 7 in the Washington School auditorium, corner of Hermosa and Homasell, Lindsay, Calif. There will be coin exhibits, numismatic speaker on "Moneys of the World", showing of educational slides, auction, door prizes and buffet evening meal. The convention will open at 9 a.m.

Reservations may be made with J.O. Nations, secretary-treasurer of the Lindsay Coin Club, P.O. Box, Lindsay, Calif. The auction will be conducted by Ronnie Carr of Tulare, Calif. W.R. Van Horn is president of the Lindsay club.

Fresno Numismatic Society is the name of the former San Joaquin Valley Coin Club, a change made at the December club meeting.

Officers elected for 1959 are Herb Hord, president; Tom Duffy, vice-president; Ronnie Carr, P.O. Box 1113, Tulare, Calif., secretary-treasurer; and Larry Marshall, corresponding secretary.

Present at the meeting was E.J. Green, Orange County Coin Club member, who spoke of that club's operation.

The January meeting of the Petaluma Coin Collectors featured members' exhibits of tokens. Harold Conner of Vallejo read an informative article on early day tokens. Mrs.

Viola Graf won the award for best exhibit.

Orchids to Mrs. Louise Heintz of Petaluma. This enthusiastic hobbyist has been elected president, secretary, treasurer and publicity chairman of the Petaluma Coin Collectors. David Baker will be vice-president.

The San Jose Coin Club, at its Jan. 5 meeting, voted to nominate Robert G. McArthur of Oakland and Herbert M. Bergen of Fullerton for offices in the American Numismatic Association—the former for board member, the latter for second vice-president. Thirty-five hardy members braved a storm to attend the meeting.

The following officers, elected at the Dec. 1 meeting, were installed: Miss Beverly Gayle Smith, president; John Cobb, vice-president; Roy Hill, recording secretary; Norman Prunier, corresponding secretary; William Stones, treasurer; Gary Acquistapace, junior vice-president; George Kohl, librarian; and Eldon Beaulieu, Rudy Gjurovich and Dennis Hooker, directors.

Clifford L. Liss of San Francisco read a paper, "United States Silver Dollars", and exhibited his dollar collection.

Officers of the Merced Coin Club for 1959, elected at the Dec. 15 meeting, were installed Jan. 19. They are Captain K.W. Ryker, president; E.L. Upton, vice-president; Ben Pelikan, secretary-treasurer, 1720 E. 26th St., Merced; Kenneth Bohner, auctioneer; and Richard Paulsen, librarian.

Fred E. Tinkham has moved back to his old home in Hanford and Darwin Summerton has moved to Nebraska.

Officers elected at the Christmas meeting of the East Bay Coin Club are Roy Hill, president; Walter Morris, vice-president; Edward S. Lane, recording secretary; R.J. Frost, corresponding secretary; Don D. Crossman, treasurer; and Edward Fogler, Lewis A. Moorman, James Todorovic and Leo Young, board of governors.

"One Hundred Years of Canadian Coins" was the theme for the Jan. 9 meeting. Dennis Olswang, club librarian, gave highlights of the first hundred years of Canadian coins under the decimal system, 1858-1958. He also presented an interesting display of Canadian material, coins and literature.

Officers for 1959 were installed by Robert G. McArthur.

The Pacific Coast Numismatic Society elected officers for 1959 at its Christmas meeting, Dec. 17. They are Clifford L. Liss, president; Milton C. Strauch, vice-president; Mrs. Harry Cutler, secretary; Paul D. Snedaker, treasurer; Cmdr. H.F. Bowker, librarian; and F.E. Howard, Lesley G. Lodge and David L. Redfield, board of governors.

Cecelia Hutt won first prize in the 1958 Papers Contest with her paper, "Ptolemaic Queens". Clifford L. Liss and Milton C. Strauch tied for second place. Cmdr. Bowker, F.E. Howard and Charles V. Kappen were judges.

The Hayward Area Coin Club held an all-afternoon meeting Sunday, Dec. 7, at newly acquired quarters in Castro Valley. Following the award of ribbons to the best exhibitors of foreign and domestic coin collections, an auction of 98 lots was held.

Russell Schumacher, executive director of the San Francisco Clearing House Association, addressed the Dec. 4 meeting of the Peninsula Coin Club, Palo Alto, on San Francisco Clearing House Certificates (see January Calcoin News).

The first issue of the certificates, Schumacher said, was in use for but a brief period, and was replaced by the second issue, with its more ornate engravings. The certificates were "dressed up" not only to look more like "hard money", but also to discourage counterfeiting.

The Association also charged the banks 8 per cent interest on these certificates until they finally were redeemed April 7, 1908. After April 7, $52,894 was outstanding out of a total issue of $6,000,007 of the new issue, plus what remained of the old. About $9600 worth of the certificates has never been redeemed, although a fund is maintained for such purpose.

It is recorded that San Jose banks used the San Francisco certificates. If so, then San Jose banks must have bought them from San Francisco banks, Schumacher said, because the San Francisco Clearing House Association issued them to San Francisco banks only.

The January club meeting, which would have fallen on Jan. 1, was canceled. Club members instead met in January with the East Bay Coin Club, Oakland, to witness installation of two of its members, Roy Hill and George Morris, as officers of the East Bay Coin Club.

The Sacramento Valley Coin Club held a business meeting and auction Jan. 27 at The Chukker, 12th and Jay, Sacramento. Claudia R. Eslinger, P.O. Box 2122, Sacramento, is now corresponding secretary.

Officers of the Pajaro Valley Coin Club, Freedom, Calif., are Al Thomas, president; W.H. Edwards, vice-president; Ed Byers, secretary; and R.C. Jolmston, treasurer. The club, of recent origin, meets at Freedom School, Building 15, first Thursday of the month at 7:30 p.m., according to Mrs. A.S. McCay.
